

Safer Working In the Field Training

1. Personal safety & security 23rd-25th Feb. Kabul

2. Management of safety & security with crisis management training 28th Feb to 4th March, at ANSO offices, Kabul

If you're working for an NGO in Afghanistan, you're probably all too aware of the everyday dangers you face in this hazardous environment. You put up with them because you're committed to getting your humanitarian job done. But did you realise that you and your colleagues could make yourselves safer – without getting in the way of your programme?

Attend our practical training, and you'll have effective tools to improve safety and security at your fingertips. You'll know how to approach each threat to make it less likely to happen, and to reduce its impact if it does happen.

More than 500 of your colleagues in Afghanistan have already attended these courses over the last three years. They have been specifically developed for the current context within Afghanistan by experienced field security staff, constantly updated as the situation changes.

As well as looking at specific threats in Afghanistan, we'll cover the bigger picture of agency safety and security so that you can contribute to the continued wellbeing of your colleagues.

You'll be learning from Armadillo's own consultants, who have decades of security experience, are dedicated to the field of humanitarian security, and have specific and deep context knowledge of Afghanistan gained through personal experience.

For your personal safety

- ▶ Review the current threats in Afghanistan and how to minimise your vulnerability to them
- ▶ Know how to minimise the likelihood of being kidnapped, and how best to survive if the worst should happen
- ▶ Understand how your own behaviour can affect your safety, and master the do's and don'ts
- ▶ Learn how to be safer where there are guns, bombs, and things that go bang
- ▶ Be ready for emergencies: know what to have and what to do, practice your new skills in a safe environment, and learn how to develop your personal contingency plan

For your team's safety

- ▶ Develop a practical understanding of the safety and security process. Know your individual security responsibilities and how you can contribute to your colleagues' safety and security
- ▶ Learn to reduce vulnerability & risks through thoughtful use of a coherent security strategy
- ▶ Know how and why to report all security and safety incidents - contributing to the security of your own agency and other humanitarians
- ▶ Understand the importance of recognising and reducing 'everyday' hazards for a safer working environment.

To read more details and to reserve your place, please go to www.armadilloatlarge.com